

PAUL MANGANELLO, MD

Board Certified

Orthopaedic Pain Medicine

Dr. Manganello is certified by the American Board of Pain Medicine and the American Board of Anesthesiology. He graduated from Georgetown University Medical School of Medicine. After completing his residency at Northwestern University, he practiced pain medicine and anesthesia in Germany and Bosnia as a major in the United States Army.

He became a member of the Edward Hospital medical staff in 1999, where he also teaches medical students. For over fifteen years, Dr. Manganello has compassionately taken care of patients living with pain. He believes in using a multidisciplinary approach, starting with the most conservative options possible. His medical interests include spine pain, cancer pain and complex regional pain syndrome, and his long list of procedures include discography, kyphoplasty, percutaneous disc nucleoplasty, various steroid injections, thoracic facet radiofrequency neurotomy and vertebroplasty. He is a member of the International Spinal Injections Society, the American Academy of Pain Medicine, the American Society of Interventional Pain Physicians and the American Society of Anesthesiologists.
